Conference overview

The Obama Administration faces significant national security challenges:

- managing ongoing military operations in two remote theaters
- staying vigilant against persistent, current threats
- identifying and preparing for future threats
- restoring and modernizing the armed forces and accomplishing all of this amidst a serious economic downturn.

As new political leaders grapple with this dangerous and unpredictable security environment, what should industry expect, and how should industry respond, to shifting trends in Department of Defense policies and programs?

We invite you to join in a discussion of these critical issues at this year's Jane's US Defense Conference: "Meeting Security Challenges in the New Administration." The conference will consist of keynote addresses, accompanied by panel discussions, on four distinct aspects of this theme:

1. The changing global security environment and its implications

What broad security flashpoints and uncertainties confront the U.S., and how should our leaders deal with them?

2. The Administration's defense priorities

How are Pentagon priorities changing in the new Administration? How will the Department balance modernization with recapitalization, and manage risk in each?

3. Influences on the defense budget

What can industry expect from Congress, the Services and warfighters? What procurement, acquisition and regulatory policies will the Administration pursue?

4. Implications for industry

What are the most promising investment and management strategies for success in the new political and budget environment? What are the most important trends in defense markets?

Our goal is to provide conference attendees with a better understanding of the Administration's defense priorities and an appreciation of how to translate that understanding into actionable insights that will shape defense business plans in 2009, and beyond.

“Outstanding attendance of speakers with outstanding expertise. Professionally excellent experience.”

US Defense Conference 2008 attendee

Key Themes

- The defense priorities of the Obama Administration and the challenges of adapting US forces for a changing world
- Implications of the global economic crisis for defense priorities and programs
- The shape and size of the US defense budget under Obama
- The implications of political change in a global economic downturn
- The defense industry in 2009-2013: Managing risk while supporting US defense requirements

Conference Audience

The conference is aimed at a high profile international audience of senior national security figures, including

- Strategists, analysts, acquisition executives, influential political leaders and other decision-makers:
- Senior executives responsible for shaping and implementing strategy within defense companies
- Policy and acquisition officials from defense ministries and other government agencies
- Senior executives from research and development organizations
- National and trade press

Why Attend?

The conference will provide you with an insight into the current challenges facing the global defense industry, and will give you an understanding of how to overcome them.

- Gain unique and unparalleled insight into the future direction of US defense priorities, programs, and budgets
- Hear how leading global executives and experts expect markets and policy to develop under the pressures of a serious economic downturn
- Identify business opportunities and make new business contacts
- Network with key policy, strategy and business leaders

Networking Reception

We understand the important value of networking in establishing contacts and new business opportunities. As a registered conference delegate, you are invited to participate in an informal "Networking Reception" which will conclude the first day's events. This unique part of the conference will provide delegates with an excellent opportunity to discuss the day's proceedings and network with other defense professionals and conference speakers.
